

Fellowship sends teachers to workshop on Holocaust

Three county educators are participating this week in a workshop called "Holocaust and Human Behavior" in Brookline, Mass., thanks to scholarships awarded by the Palm Beach Fellowship of Christians and Jews.

They are Laura Jane Linck of Palm Beach, dean of faculty and program development at Rosarian Academy; Bryan Sandala of Palm Beach Gardens, an English language arts instructional specialist for the county school district, and Carolina Simon of Coconut Creek, a language arts teacher at Loggers Run Community Middle School.

"The information, training, and inspiration that the teachers bring back from this weeklong program to their classrooms, schools and community are invaluable to them personally and professionally, and dovetail beautifully with the mission of the fellowship," said Rosalie Franks, the fellowship's Education Committee chairwoman and a college professor.

The workshop is organized by Facing History and Ourselves, a nonprofit international educational and professional development organization engaging participants to examine racism, prejudice and anti-Semitism.

For more information, call 833-6150 or visit palm-beachfellowship.net.

FOCUS ON FAITH