

My work shows the process of a man rising when he has fallen, displaying Guest's concept of trying again, even if you fail the first time. You must leave your failure behind, not allowing it to affect you as you move forward. My work displays this as the outline of the man grows darker, more visible, as he stands and less noticeable when he is fallen. When you fall down, you must stand up, even when it seems impossible.